Relax to Get Relief From Nervous State

If you are a victim of the stress and strain of the times, and find yourself in a particularly nervous condition, the best relief is to relax. Doctors know that this is the first step in relieving various types of spasmodic disturbances.

Several special systems of relaxation have been developed and promoted for the purpose, but there is no magic formula. Nevertheless, there are a few simple conditions which you should observe to obtain the best results.

First of all, you must have a quiet room in which you should lie with your eyes closed. This serves to diminish distraction and also enables you to concentrate easily on your share in the performance.

Then you should breathe easily 20 or 30 times, until you reach your usual rhythm of breathing during sleep. When you have reached this stage, any person who might be aiding you to gain relaxation should stroke the muscles in the direction of the fibers while you let yourself go completely.

You should be loosely as if you were to sink through the bed or the couch.

When you have reached this condition, in which you lie like a dead weight, your attendant may then help you relax the muscles of the head and face. Frowns and wrinkles of concentration are stroked away.

The muscles which set the jaws and make the mouth firm usually are most difficult to relax. It is also difficult to relax the muscles of the neck.

These may be loosened by lifting and lowering your head until it drops easily of its own weight.

Then you should go on toward relaxation of all the muscles, including those of the thighs and arms. Eventually you will learn to relax each group of muscles in turn, and finally you will be able to develop a completely relaxed condition for yourself.

After you have learned to relax, you should regularly go through the rhythmic breathing of sleep and the process of relaxation. You will then require about 15 minutes to reach a completely relaxed state, after which you should fall easily into natural sleep.

It is highly desirable that you get some outdoor exercise daily. This is an especially good aid to sound sleep at night.

But do not carry the exercise to a point of exhaustion or such great fatigue that relaxation becomes impossible.

Where Facts Make Fiction Seem Pale—'Empire of the Snakes' Tells Weird Tale of Africa

If you have ever doubted that real life can cook up facts that make ordinary pipe dreams seem tame, read "The Empire of the Snakes," by F. G. Carnochan and H. C. Adamson.

Here we have a sober and reputable scientific treatise on Africa with the kind of tale that Rider Haggard ought to have invented.

Mr. Carnochan went into Tanganyika to collect animals, birds, and reptiles for the National Zoological Park in Washington. He ran straight into a shadowy and invisible empire; a species of brotherhood, or lodge, among the black men which not only wielded extraordinary power, but which possessed almost incredible knowledge of obscure medicines and drugs.

For instance, the black mamba is about the deadliest of all poisonous snakes, and science has not yet found an antidote for its venom. Mr. Carnochan found these blacks with a drug which rendered its users utterly immune to the poison, so that they went out and caught mambas—to say nothing of ordinary cobras—with their bare hands.

They had another charming little drug which turned the user into a stupor, felt no pain, and had to do

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Feed Baby a Variety of Food.

Nothing is quite so important to health as food. The well-being of a little child depends on it, and its future stamina will reflect nutritive discrepancies in babyhood.

The mother who thinks that there is time enough ahead for corrective diet is laboring under a sort of traditional delusion. This is quite natural, however, as it happens, after centuries of thinking that up until two years of age and sometimes longer, milk is the sum total of everything.

Milk is the warp and the wool of what it takes to get through life, and especially at its beginning. But it needs supplementing, because its chemistry is low in a few needed essentials and the child, set in his all-milk diet, resists other foods.

Doctors Prescribe Varied Foods. Doctors long ago recognized the value of adding other foods to the diet of the baby. In babyhood, in order to offset future finicky appetites, thus the infant of six weeks gets his codliver oil and orange juice or tomato juice; a little later a spoonful or two of prepared vegetable juice or even the strained vegetable itself.

At a period that in the past would have been considered murderous, he gets his bit of cereal, part of the yolk of an egg, a snack of baked potato and mashed stewed fruit.

Whatever today's baby is given, should, of course, be absolutely under the doctor's direction. There is a difference in babies. What may be one baby's making might be another's doing. Food lists, the amount of food given, timing, and combinations cannot be done by guess-work. Schedule is as important as the calories themselves.

But the great truth that many mothers do not know is that children with touchy appetites at six or eight or ten years of age, are the results of fixed preference in babyhood. They have not had enough variety during their first three years to give them an open mind about flavors.

Caution Must Be Exercised. This does not mean, dear mother, that you can take baby on your knee at the table and feed him off your plate. The French fried potatoes, the strawberry shortcake, pork-chop gravy and the short bread would likely kill him. The combination very likely will kill you, too. His stomach is pretty delicate yet, and his diet must always be in keeping with his ability to digest.

Another thing that should be remembered is that as milk must be the alpha and omega of his meal, therefore the amounts of other foods given must not be so great that the willingness to take milk is decreased.

The doctor will give you lists and schedules for feeding. My suggestions here are only for one purpose. That is to show "why" and "how" aversions to needed foods are started. Food habits, which means flavor habits, have to be cultivated early.

Care of Child's Skin Decides Mature Beauty

From the time she's born until she reaches the age when cosmetics intrigue her, a little girl's beauty is her mother's problem. Given the right care while she is a little thing, the chances are that her skin will stay soft and smooth—her hair healthy and shining—all through the years to come.

Small children should be taught to brush their hair soon as they are old and big enough to hold a hairbrush. Prior to that time, their mothers must do it for them. Likewise, the weekly shampoo is an important ritual mothers shouldn't neglect.

Have your child use the best and purest soap you can buy. If, after the nightly, or even the morning, scrub-

SEARGENT MAHONEY turned to his men. "Get Vera Ducheane," he said. "Pick up Bob Calse. Tell Cynthia Hap she's wanted at headquarters at once. Pick up the liquor dealer at 339 Torrence avenue. He's a cheap about 33, with a white mustache. Clear the corridor. Search this room and 509 with a fine-tooth comb. Take that man to jail quarters and make him talk."

Sergeant Mahoney bent over Dick Gentry's body. He pulled things from the pockets—cash, a wallet, an envelope, a memorandum book. He thrust these things in his own pockets, nodded to Millicent.

"You and Norman come with me," he said.

Sergeant Mahoney wasted no time on the elevator. He took to the stairs. Millicent and Norman followed him. Once in his room they heard the scream of the siren as the car tore through the streets.

Sergeant Mahoney skidded around a corner, slammed on brakes.

"This is Dick Gentry's apartment," Norman Hap said.

"Exactly," Mahoney told him. "Your father was killed by force. Gentry could have hired him to his apartment. We'll see what we can discover."

He fitted a key into a lock and opened a door, switched on light and ran across the room.

Jarvis Hap, apparently lifeless, lay sprawled on a bed.

Sergeant Mahoney leaned over him, put an ear to the man's chest.

Sergeant Mahoney got to his feet, strode to the telephone, jerked the receiver from its hook, said, "Police headquarters." While he waited for connection, he turned to Norman Hap and said, "He's alive, but drugged. I think they gave him an over-dose at the least, but we can save him if we can get him to a hospital in time."

INTO the telephone he said, "Headquarters? Sergeant Mahoney. Rush an ambulance, Doctor Cathcart, a stomach pump, and complete equipment for treatment of drug poisoning to Apartment 904, 4413 Cherry street. I want them here within five minutes."

He slammed up the receiver, turned to Norman Hap and said, "Start talking. Tell me everything you know about the woman in the black ermine coat."

Norman Hap said, "Why, there isn't much to say. I've seen her several times. She comes to call on Cynthia and advises her about numerology and astrology. She . . ."

Sergeant Mahoney nodded. He went into the kitchen of the apartment, pulled open cupboard doors.

"Millicent," he said, "make some strong black coffee. The doctor will want some when he gets here. I'm going to talk with Norman."

Millicent went to the kitchen, made coffee, and had no more than brought the pot to a boil when she heard the sound of feet in the corridor.

A moment later the kitchen door opened and a bald-headed, short, thick-set individual with a smiling face said, "Have you some coffee?"

Millicent nodded.

Sergeant Mahoney said, "Pull him through, Doctor. These folks are going with me to headquarters. Come on, you two."

His dynamic personality dominated everything and everyone. Unquestioningly, Millicent and Norman accompanied him to his car.

bing, her skin seems dry, smooth on a bit of good tissue cream, leave it on for a few minutes and then remove with soft tissues. There's no reason to think that cream isn't the thing to put on a child's skin. Don't make a habit of it, but do it whenever she's been out in the cold wind for hours or when you see signs of excessive dryness. To prevent chapping, use a cream or a lotion on her little hands, too.

Teach your daughters, and sons to push back the cuticle around their nails each time they dry their hands on a towel. Show them how to brush their teeth up and down as well as across. And make sure that their visits to the dentist are regular. The core of the first teeth is important; you know. Unless they are given proper attention, the second set is likely to be defective.

Make a game, not a duty, of cleanliness. The child who is taught to enjoy a daily bath and other good grooming routines will form fine habits that will be invaluable all of his life.

NEXT: Hair problems.

Pontiac Is Near Total 1934 Sales

70,558 Through April Against 76,553 for All of Last Year

April production of Pontiac automobiles reached the high point of the year with a total of 18,749 cars, according to A. W. L. Gilpin, vice-president and general manager of the Pontiac Motor company.

"This figure brings our total production of 1935 models up to 70,558 cars," said Mr. Gilpin, "a figure which is 92 per cent of the total for last year of 1934 models. The entire 1934 model production was 76,553 cars."

"At the present rate of operation the 1934 model total will be passed before the middle of May. The number of unfilled orders on hand will put us over the 1934 total with several thousand to spare."

Termites, or "white ants," are an important item on the diet of African natives, and battles often are fought for possession of the giant ant hills, and the wild speculation in 1936.

Our lives are songs: God writes the words,
And we set them to music at pleasure.
And the songs grow glad, or sweet or sad,
As we choose to fashion the measure.
We must write the music, whatever the song,
Whatever its rhyme or metre.
And if it is glad, we may make it sad,
Or if sweet, we may make it sweeter.

New Music Show at the Saenger

"All the King's Horses" on Hope Screen Thursday and Friday

Comedy, songs, spectacle and romance in a hilarious story of royal lovers makes "All the King's Horses," which opens Thursday at the Saenger one of those pictures nobody can afford to miss. Introducing Mary Ellis, lovely singing star of the state, to the American film public it stars Carl Brisson and features Edward Everett Horton, Katherine DeMille and Eugene Pallette in the principal supporting roles.

Based on the play of the same name which enjoyed successful runs in New York and Chicago, "All the King's Horses" is the story of the king who lost his queen because he wore an ancestral beard and spent his time in conferences instead of at his lady's side.

The king secures a double to fill his throne and hurries off to Vienna to learn about life, love and gaiety—hoping to surprise his spouse. But, while he is away, the queen returns and falls in love with the embarrassed and agitated double.

This tantalizing comedy situation is finally resolved when the king and queen are happily reunited on their second honeymoon in Vienna. The picture is filled with a flock of excellent brand-new tunes by Sam Coslow, including the already popular "A Little White Gardenia" and "When My Prince Charming Comes Along." Mary Ellis displays the personal charm and remarkable singing voice which won her a first place on the stage, and Brisson renders a performance even better than that he gave in his first American picture, "Murder at the Vanities."

They use 300 gallons of fresh water a minute to purify the clean flax linen pulp that Chesterfield paper is made of Slitting and winding wide rolls of cigarette paper into reels.

Over and over again they boil and wash the pure flax linen shreds before they are rolled out into thin crisp paper and cut into rolls for Chesterfield cigarettes.

Every step in the manufacture and everything about the big modern factory where Chesterfield paper is made is spotless and clean.

Before the paper is shipped to this country it is tested for three things—

- Purity
- Right burning quality
- No taste or odor

There is no better paper made than that used on Chesterfield—another thing that makes it a milder, better-tasting cigarette.
